LIKELY TO ACCEPT BASIC PRINCIPLES OF PINCHOT'S PLAN

Republican Organization Indicates Willingness to Approve Liquor Measures

HOLD SPECIAL CAUCUS

Will Give Approval to Five Bills on Second Reading

By Robert F. Gorman
(N. S. Staff Correspondent)

Explicit instructions, implying that the Republican organization is ready to accept the basic principles of Gov. Gifford Pinchot's liquor control and taxation program, assured advancement of six administration liquor control and taxation bills in the House today.

At a special Republican caucus, representatives were instructed to give approval to five bills on second reading and the McClure measure providing for state stores and retail sales on first reading calendar. Grover C. Talbot, speaker of the house, announced a Thursday session, making it possible for the five bills to pass finally in the lower house this week.

Objection was raised at the caucus by representatives from larger cities to provisions of the control bill prohibiting the old-fashioned bar in private clubs. They contended a club is a "man's second home" and he should be permitted to have a bar if he so chooses. Rep. Joseph G. Steedle, Allegheny, led a group from the urban districts, which voiced opposition to state stores.

Political observers regard this partial endorsement as indications that the Republican organization, lacking a program of its own, is willing to carry out the recommendations of the Governor to satisfy the general cry for hasty liquor legislation. The control bill appears to be the only one facing a battle and sentiment may change over the week-end. Under existing plans, the bill will receive a test Monday night.

Experiences with beer bills last winter have convinced leaders they will get no place with measures patterned after the Brooks high license law which the Governor will veto.

Consequently, the administration liquor bills gained the favor of committee men in preference to three documents empowering judges to issue licenses. Democrats, satisfied with their "watchful waiting" policy, have remained silent during the liquor deliberations.

Republican leaders have agreed to push through the House this week five bills. They are the Witkin bill for a permanent tax of $1 per proof gallon; 30 cents per rectified gallon; and one cent per unit of proof wine in gallons on liquors manufactured or imported after repeal; the Cordier bill for a $2 per proof gallon tax on all liquor manufactured or stored in Pennsylvania before repeal; Spann and Zimmerman bills amending the beer act; and the Wilson document increasing permit fees for breweries and distilleries.

The Senate, scene of Governor Pinchot's eight-point recovery program, considered on final passage the Gelder bill authorizing the Department of Highways to borrow Federal funds for construction of bridges in conjunction with the National Recovery drive.

After approving on second reading the Scott bill designed to permit a $14,000,000 state public construction program to be financed on money borrowed from Federal authorities, the Senate returned it to committee. The committee is divided over the feasibility of "mortgaging" future taxpayers to permit the Commonwealth to borrow $10,000,000 for repayment over a 30-year period.

CHANGE DATE

The Philadelphia Operatic Society announces that owing to unavoidable circumstances the performance of "Tales of Hoffman" will be on Monday evening, December 4th, in the Philadelphia Academy of Music, instead of as originally announced. An entirely new organization plan has been adopted by the Society whereby its future is more definitely assured. Mr. John Thoms has accepted the position of musical director, and Mr. Karl T. F. Schroeder that of stage director.

Merchants To Organize A Permanent Association

Every merchant in Bristol is requested to be at an important meeting to be held in the Moose home, Lafayette and Radcliffe streets at 9 o'clock tonight. The purpose of the meeting is to organize a merchants' association.

Acting chairman, Richard W. French, in speaking of the meeting stressed the need of an organized business group to promote co-operation among business people and launch a "Now is the time to Buy" campaign in Bristol.

The nominating committee, consisting of Percy G. Ford, Edward Flanagan, Edgar Spencer, Abe Popkin and Joseph Martino will submit names to be voted on for the election of permanent officers.

A number of important questions will be discussed with plans for Christmas business being arranged.

RAISE FEWER TURKEYS ON PENNSYLVANIA FARMS

Survey Shows Crop To Be 10% Lower Than Last Year

LOW PRICE IS THE CAUSE

Those who are anticipating having turkey for Thanksgiving will be annoyed to learn that fewer turkeys were raised on Pennsylvania farms this year than a year ago, according to a survey recently made by the Federal State Crop Reporting Service. Production is believed to be not more than 30 per cent of the 1933 crop, 52 per cent of which will be ready for the Thanksgiving market, 38 per cent for Christmas and 10 per cent later. In addition to the shorter crop, cold storage holdings of turkeys in Pennsylvania on October 1 were 24 per cent less than on the corresponding date a year ago.

The low price received for last year's turkey crop proved very discouraging to Pennsylvania growers and tended to curb production this year. Mortality in some sections, especially in the southeastern part of the State, was unusually high on account of the continued wet weather, but in some counties in the western part where drought prevailed, growing conditions were ideal and an increase in the number raised this year is reported.

The number of turkeys in the United States this fall, was reported as somewhat less than in 1932. Turkeys in ordinary farm flocks are about as numerous as a year ago but those in large commercial flocks are believed to be fewer. As these large flocks produce a considerable part of the total supply, it seems apparent that total production of turkeys this year, while again large, is hardly up to very heavy production of last year, Federal marketing authorities explain. No forecast of turkey prices is made.

Fifty Witness A Peace Program of W. C. T. U.

Nearly 50 people, including school children who took part, enjoyed an interesting program on "Peace" at the Women's Christian Temperance Union meeting in the Travel Club home, last evening.

After a short business session at which Mrs. Minnie Coon conducted devotional service, and Mrs. Harry Headley announced distribution of numerous pages of literature before the recent election, 12 children from Washington, Bath and Wood street schools, portrayed in costumes children of many lands, reciting verses typical of the various countries, and singing their folk-songs. The final song was "How Sleep the Brave." The scholars recited: "In hearts too young for enmity, lies the way to make men free. When children's friendships are world-wide, new ages will be glorified. Let child love child, and strife will cease; disarm the heart, and that is peace."

Miss Longshore in addressing the older people told of a recent peace conference in Philadelphia, addressed by notable leaders, among them Dr. Mary Woolley, who urged persistent effort and co-operation with all agencies working little by little toward attainment of good will among men.

Vocal duets by Mrs. A. B. Sands and Mrs. Russell DeLong; also by Miss Helen Nichol and Miss Hertzler, were greatly enjoyed. The accompanist was Miss Mary Carly.

Refreshments of home-made cake and coffee were served the adults, and the children enjoyed cake and ice cream.

EDGELY GUILD GOES "OVER THE TOP" WITH 1862 ARTICLES DISPLAYED AFTER 7TH IN-GATHERING; 80 WOMEN ASSEMBLE FOR EXHIBIT, HAWKES' HOME

INCREASE EACH YEAR

Garments Will Be Distributed After Thanksgiving Holiday

EDGELY, Nov. 15.—The seventh annual ingathering and exhibition of garments by Edgely Branch, Needlework Guild of America, was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Thomas G. Hawkes. There were 80 women attending, and all expressed great surprise at the variety and number of beautiful garments arranged so pleasingly on the spacious sun-porch.

Members of this guild and their friends, knowing how much suffering there is, have worked hard, so they might be better prepared to alleviate the suffering not only in this community, but throughout Bucks County, and some institutions in Philadelphia. The members have worked this year with a desire to take care of the larger trials so they will be prepared to go to school, as well as the smaller child. The display was very attractive, the colors bright, and all garments useful. The collection consists of warm underclothing of all descriptions, as well as very attractive outer garments; and to this list has been added this year, bed linen. The total to date of garments displayed is 1862, an increase over last year of 234. The sewing committee reported making 603 garments, and purchasing $24.

Mrs. Walter G. Stilwell, president, presided at the meeting, and called for the reports of the secretary, Mrs. William O'Dea, and of the treasurer, Mrs. Herbert Banes.

Mrs. Stilwell very cordially welcomed the members and their friends, expressing pleasure at having so many people attend these meetings, and invited all to examine the garments closely. She stressed the point of quality, rather than quantity, stating it is the desire of the Guild to increase its number each year, adding it was most happy to announce an increase again this year.

The president extended to Mrs. Roland Quinn her appreciation in behalf of the guild for earnest efforts and untiring interest in cutting material for the sewing committee. Thanks was expressed to Mrs. Burd Fowler for donation of material; to Mrs. Robert Pearson, who purchased material; to Mrs. Hawkes, for her many kindnesses to the guild members and for her untiring efforts to aid at all times.

Mrs. Stilwell then introduced Mrs. John B. Hartmann, Elkins Park, an ardent worker of the Needlework Guild, who told the women of the things that really make this wonderful

BUSY NOW WITH PLAYS

Announcement is made that pins will be awarded this year by the Mothers' Association to those students who have worked for at least two years on the staff of "The Rambler," the official Bristol high school paper. ### WOODIN LEAVES POST

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—(INS)—Secretary of the Treasury, William H. Woodin, will take an indefinite leave of absence from his cabinet post, and Henry Morgenthau, Jr., will be appointed acting secretary, the White House announced today.

The reason prompting Woodin to retire from the treasury post was concern for his health. He is suffering from a chronic throat infection, and has been away from Washington for several weeks.

Dean Acheson, of Maryland, who has been under-secretary of the treasury, is also retiring, it was announced, as he desires to return to private business. Secretary Woodin submitted his resignation to President Roosevelt October 31st. He wanted to retire delicately from the post. After three days' consideration of the matter President Roosevelt suggested that instead of resigning outright, he take an indefinite leave of absence. To that Woodin assented.

Mr. Woodin plans to leave the latter part of the week for Arizona. No successor has been named for Morgenthau who has been head of the farm credit administration.

ABDUCT WOMAN FROM HOME

Dallas, Texas, Nov. 15.—Mrs. Pearl Hall, 39, employed in a chain store grocery was abducted from her room early today by two women, taken to the residence of L. Wirt Boone, a hardware buyer, and after being accused of being "too intimate" with Boone, she was shot to death before him. Mrs. M. N. Boone, 35, wife of the man and mother of an eight-year-old son, was taken into custody and made a statement in which she was said, by officers, to have admitted the shooting.

Mrs. R. Morrison, a friend of Mrs. Boone, was held as a material witness. Mrs. Hall was aroused early today and forced to go to the Boone home. There she was forced to talk to Boone. Following the conversation, Mrs. Hall was shot to death. Details of the abduction and shooting were given in Mrs. Boone's statement, officials said.

NAME SELLERSVILLE TO GET P. O. BUILDING

Ickes Includes Bucks County Town in List for New Structures

APPROPRIATE $65,000.00

Sellersville is named as one of the 160 towns to get post office buildings under the $16,678,675 allotment set aside for the purpose by Harold L. Ickes, public works administrator. A total of 237 public buildings of various kinds is on the nation-wide program.

The announcement of the allotment, which leaves the post office department free to go ahead with the project at once, creates a confusing situation in Sellersville, where bids had been asked on the rental of a building to house the office. The bids were to have been opened on November 1, and were originally to have quoted prices on a year's lease. This was later changed to two years, with a third year as optional. What the department will do under the present circumstances is still undecided.

As yet, the site of the prospective post office is not selected, which is the greatest single obstacle in the way of getting work under way immediately. Washington inspectors are expected in the community at any time to make their selection from the several sites offered.

The allotment set aside for Sellersville is $65,000, which must cover the entire project.

"KNAVE'S GIRL", NEW NOVEL, APPEARS IN COURIER TODAY

Is a girl's reputation everything? Can a modern girl tell everything to the man she loves? How much will a man forgive the girl he loves? All these questions which occur to every girl with special significance today are answered in "Knaive's Girl," the new serial by Joan Clayton which the Courier will begin today.

"Knaive's Girl" is an exciting love story which occurs in the frenzied fever of the contract-bridge craze which swept New York society last winter. Patricia, whose only inheritance from her father, a Southern gentleman and a gambler, is skill at cards, is suddenly offered an opportunity to change her lot from actual want to affluence when Julian Haverholt, the country's greatest bridge player, offers to make her his partner in tournament play.

Haverholt's reputation with women is bad, but New York society cares little for that and is demanding his presence everywhere. For purposes of publicity he wants to introduce Patricia to society as his "niece." She is to live in his great house.

Patricia risks her reputation but keeps her self respect. But then she finds that Clark Tracy, polo player, and considered the greatest "catch" in society, has fallen in love with her. Does she dare tell him the truth about herself?

Her predicament with an adventurer as a partner, the hero of the polo fields as a constant admirer and a gangster, a neighbor of her poorer days, threatening to kidnap her, makes one of the most exciting love stories yet written about the exciting times we live in. Don't miss a single instalment. Each one has its exciting moments. "Knaive's Girl" begins today.

DISMISS APPEAL OF GOODAVAGE FROM TREASURER'S RULING

Bensalem Man Is Refused A License for Place at Cornwells Heights

QUASH OFFICIALS' CASE

Judge Boyer Comments On Supplemental Report Filed In Tax Case

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 15.—Judge Boyer dismissed the appeal of Louis Goodavage, Bensalem Township, in which he appealed from the refusal of the County Treasurer to grant a license under the License Beverage Law, and upheld the action of the County Treasurer.

In the matter of the motion to quash the report of the auditors of Chalfont borough, Judge Calvin S. Boyer in a session of argument court on Monday handed down an opinion making the rule absolute and striking off the portion of the auditors' report entitled a "supplemental report," wherein they surcharged the Chalfont Borough Council and the school board with certain amounts of taxes not paid by the guests of the P. O. S. of A. Home.

The "supplemental report," according to Judge Boyer, was quashed for the reason that it combined and intermingled the accounts of two separate municipalities, namely, the borough and the school district, so that they could not be separated.

The school district's accounts had been audited and confirmed six months before the supplemental report was filed. The Court held that the original audit could not be modified that length of time after it has been filed and confirmed.

In concluding, the Court said: "It is with regret that we feel compelled to strike off the supplemental report, inasmuch as it shows a great deal of conscientious labor and intelligent effort on the part of the auditors to perform their duties. However, this consideration cannot affect the legal conclusions which we have reached."

In the supplementary report, filed in the Court of Quarter Sessions, the auditors stated that the guests or inmates of the Home of Patriotic Order of Sons of America have been exonerated from the payment of school and borough taxes. They do, however, pay county taxes, which permits them to vote, but refuse to pay the other taxes on the ground that they are indigents.

ROOSEVELT GREET'S SMITH

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—A large branch, well fruited with olives, was extended in the direction of Alfred E. Smith from the White House, President Roosevelt has made two significant gestures toward the man whom he labeled the "happy warrior" and thrice placed in nomination for the Presidency, and the man who opposed his own nomination in 1932.

The first and most significant of these gestures was the appointment of Smith's friend, John J. Hoey, as internal revenue collector in New York. The second was to invite the former Governor to the White House. "Al" came, and a pleasant time was had. Political affairs were not discussed; nor was the NRA; nor the Roosevelt monetary policy concerning which Smith has been critically skeptical in his recent writings. It was a social visit, the first they have had in many political moons. Politicians interpreted the President's gestures in Smith's direction as a bid for "Al's" support in ousting John F. Curry as leader of Tammany Hall. Both Roosevelt and Smith are opposed to Curry and his policy; Roosevelt to the extent that he sanctioned the insurgent McKee candidacy in the recent mayoralty fight and Smith to the extent of refusing to support Curry's organization candidate, O'Brien. Both would like to see Tammany re-organized. Probably neither could do it alone without considerable trouble, but together they could do it, without much difficulty; or so the politicians think, at any rate.

ANOTHER CENSUS?

A number of arguments are cited by the American Statistical Association why another general census should be taken by the Federal Census Bureau next year, although the results of the last have not yet been fully analyzed. The bureau has received the suggestion, think well of it and may ask Congress for authority and funds.

Arguments enough suggest themselves to the lay mind, so the expert should find no trouble vindicating another enumeration midway between the regular decennial census.

Perhaps the first reason that presents itself is that it would furnish temporary employment to thousands of men and women. Anything that makes jobs without waste is worth considering.

Many agencies in many fields would find a new census in 1934 or 1935 of the utmost value. The government would find fresh statistics helpful in its recovery program if recovery is not complete by that time. Should consummation of the enumeration find the economic ship on an even keel, Congress could make good use of the information obtained in charting other rough seas that ship may encounter from time to time.

Business and industry, on the road to peak sales and production, will need all available census data in their search for new markets, for undeveloped markets and for dangerous pitfalls.

CHICAGO JUSTICE

There is something in a little incident reported from Chicago which public leaders seeking the cause of America's crime wave might ponder.

It relates to justice as it is understood by Chicago judges and officials.

In 1928, the home of Mrs. Clara Alt was burglarized. The supposed burglars were arrested. Twenty times their trial has been scheduled, to begin only to be postponed each time. Mrs. Alt anxious to contribute her part to the carrying out of justice, was on hand each time to testify.

Then, the other day, came the twenty-first time for the case to be called. Mrs. Alt was absent. She had been appointed to a woman's committee to welcome Mrs. Roosevelt to the world's fair. She performed this duty instead of going to court where, she well may have believed, she again would not be called to testify.

But such indifference was resented by the judge. An officer was sent out to find Mrs. Alt. He did, and she was brought into court and fined $10.

This is justice in Chicago.

Is it any wonder that crime flourishes there to perhaps a greater extent than in any American city?

There was one good thing about the longer courtship of old times. It resulted in longer marriage.

It is especially difficult to control a temper that faces an armed man 40 pounds lighter.

The white ant, which lays 84,000 eggs a day, should be told about crop reduction.

Parents, who once yearned to seem "refined" now have children who are content to seem sophisticated.

CHAPTER ONE

It was the last rubber of the evening. Both sides were vulnerable. Patricia Warren had carried the bid to six hearts. She studied the one small trump in the dummy. Could she make the contract? She avoided her partner's eyes. At the moment more than anything in the world she dreaded Eileen Sycott's complaining whine. When one is paid to fill in at bridge one must learn to take such things lightly. But that, Patricia had never learned.

She led the singleton from the dummy. Her face was pale, her hands were shaking slightly as she played the ace. With four trumps out the Knave should fall. It did not fall. Patricia experienced a shock of pure dismay. The four missing hearts were massed against her. Across the table Eileen Sycott winced audibly. She was a fussy little fat woman, elaborately jeweled. Her expression mingled pain and indignation.

"You should have tried the finesse," she observed in an injured, faintly acid tone. She ignored the straightness of her young guest's lips. Julian Haverholt frowned.

"An absurd risk," he put in sharply. "The chances were all that she would drop the Knave."

"Patricia shouldn't have bid the slam without a solid trump suit."

"You invited the slam with a bid of five!"

"Patricia looked frightened. But he tall, gray haired Julian Haverholt was perhaps the greatest bridge player in America. His presence in Mrs. Sycott's luxurious Washington Square apartment was the result of weeks of patient strategy. An acknowledged genius in his own field he had long ago adopted the mercurial temperament of genius. He was entirely capable of flinging his cards to the floor and stalking from the house forever. The wealthy, socially minded widow dared not offend him, though she was secretly infuriated and determined that Patricia should pay for her wounded amour propre. She erased the petulant scowl that marred her forehead, glanced at Haverholt and smiled sweetly. When he failed to soften she hastily poured upon her shrinking partner a stream of insincere reassurance.

The girl detected its insincerity and was not reassured. She knew that she must make the bid. In a passion of concentration she studied the hand. Deliberately she emptied her mind of everything except the game. Already she had lost one trick. There must be some way to make the rest. She leaned forward tense, rigid as a statue. The brilliance of her eyes increased; her pallor deepened. She stared and stared at the cards exposed, unconcerned of Haverholt's fascinated regard or of Mrs. Sycott's restless stirring or of the second man's open incredulity. They were nothing to her now. They could not touch her now. Only the cards were real.

Some way out, there must be some way out—some way to make her slam. There was one way. And presently with a queer slow stir of the blood Patricia saw that way. A quadruple grand coup, one of the "arrest" plays in bridge, would capture the trump honor—if it worked. Patricia began to tremble.

She led the first card. Her campaign was planned. She executed it with speed and brilliancy. There was no faltering now. She seemed made of iron, nerveless. Shuttle-like she flashed to and fro from the dummy to her own hand. The room was silent save for the fall of cards on the polished table. Patricia took the ninth trick, the tenth. Her breath came faster. The coup was working. It had worked! As Eileen Sycott, crowing triumphantly, raised in the previous twelfth trick, Patricia leaned back against her chair and burst into tears.

Immediately Haverholt was be-

"Miss Warren has a job now with me—if she wants it," declared Haverholt unexpectedly.

side her.

"Whatever is the matter?" demanded Mrs. Sycott crossly. "I never saw a luckier card player."

"I don't know when I've seen a better card player," said Haverholt in reproof. He added reflectively, "that is, of course, excluding myself."

Patricia smiled wanly at this characteristic bit of braggadocio. Her tears, the product of overwrought nerves, stopped as abruptly as they had come. She declined a handkerchief. Instinctively she divined her hostess's annoyance at the situation. Haverholt still held her arm. It seemed to her that the touch verged on intimacy. She shifted her position. The insistent pressure did not lessen. Haverholt's gaze too was warm and—practiced.

"I'm all right now," Patricia announced, sending a wintry glance to the man who stood above her.

"Sure?"

"Quite sure."

Reluctantly his hands dropped. Eileen Sycott and young Tommy Armour were busy adding up the score. Mrs. Sycott's pointed concentration testified to her continued irritation. So when Haverholt again spoke of the play of the last hand, Patricia said:

"You've forgotten that my partner's bidding had something to do with the result."

Somewhat red of face Eileen Sycott chimed in, "Mr. Haverholt doesn't seem to realize that if I hadn't bid five you couldn't have gone to six."

"Ah—but I do realize it," said Haverholt in a peculiar voice. "You remarked on that earlier."

Mrs. Sycott looked at him in a rather baffled fashion but when he joined her on the other side of the table she seemed mollified. For minutes Patricia had longed to go. Now she rose and slipped inconspicuously toward the door. But Haverholt had been watching her.

"You're not going!" he exclaimed, surprised. "Why we probably owe you thousands of dollars. How much is it, Tommy?" he inquired of his friend.

"Seventy dollars apiece is what I make it."

"You don't owe me anything," murmured Patricia.

Again she attempted to escape. But this was the opportunity for which Eileen Sycott had been waiting and she seized it.

"Patricia can't afford to gamble," she explained in quiet satisfaction. "I carry the child and pay her for her time."

"It must be a darned good investment," remarked young Armour. "I wouldn't mind making a similar investment myself. How about it some evening, Miss Warren?"

"I only play in the neighborhood," said Patricia, stiffly.

"Her stepmother runs a little shop in the next block," resumed Mrs. Sycott, taking placid command of the conversation. "Patricia hasn't been able to get a job and so—"

"Miss Warren has a job now with me—if she wants it," declared Haverholt unexpectedly. He looked straight into Patricia's eyes and said, "I'll make you one of the world's great bridge players."

Eileen Sycott's mouth made a round red "o" of surprise. "Marvelous!" she cried, clapping her hands in belated delight. Young Armour was the picture of astonishment. A thousand times he had heard Haverholt's opinions of women at the game of bridge.

Patricia alone was silent. She seemed dazed by good fortune. Her eyes were like stars; her lips were half parted. Haverholt's offer almost overwhelmed the girl who for weeks, for months, had trod the streets of New York in hopeless search of a job. That year not even her fresh and lovely face could gain her a hearing. Always the fatal words "no experience" had barred her out. And now—this, the miracle! A miracle that meant her two small stepdaughters could have the clothes, the nourishing food they needed, a miracle that meant independence for Patricia herself, a miracle that meant escape from her stepmother's nagging voice. Patricia wanted to dance, to shout with joy. Her brilliant eyes were fixed upon the handsome, gray haired man.

"I—I can hardly believe you mean it," she faltered.

"I do mean it."

"You're a very lucky little girl," announced Eileen Sycott, resigned to the inevitable.

"Oh, don't I know it!"

BEHIND the SCENES in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD. . . . . If it isn't love, why is Gary Cooper hounding every effort to leave Hollywood to join Sandra Shaw, who airplane it East, or at least was supposed to?

The film colony's most talked about couple of the moment returned from their Arizona trip apparently minus a marriage license, but still very much engaged.

And the fact that Sandra wore no ring didn't fool some of us. We happen to know that the square baguette diamond ring of awesome proportions had to go back to the jeweler for re-fitting.

Gary and his party didn't do any hunting, as they expected to when they left here. They played golf and loafed around. Then, deciding that the motor trip back was too arduous, they had Gary's chauffeur fly up to get the car and returned to Hollywood by train.

In all probability, the tall film star will take a several months' vacation from the screen. Don't be surprised if he and Sandra are married in New York and go on to Europe for a honeymoon.

A certain man-about-Hollywood is very amusing when in his cups. The other night, relates Allen Rivkin, he arrived at a party in a noisy state.

A friend took him aside. "What are you doing here like this?" he asked. "Were you even invited?"

The drunk drew himself up in offended dignity. "Not only was I invited," he said, "but I declined."

Now we know the real reason why Gary Grant grabbed a plane for New York. Virginia Cherrill left here two days before headed for Europe and preceded by many letters of introduction which Gary wrote to friends in England.

Incidentally, Gary's departure took even his best friend, Randolph Scott, by surprise. Randy came home and found Gary and his luggage gone. The two have been talking of spending Christmas together in London. That is if Randy can tear himself away from Vivian Gaye.

Next to Marie Dressler, the hapriest looking person at the big testimonial in her honor was George Hill, the director. He came to the party with Frances Marion, his estranged wife (Mary Pickford was with them, too) and from all indications the rumored reconciliation between the pair is near at hand, which won't make studio heads feel badly at all, for their pair make a great writer-director combination.

Though she made the grandest speech of her life, poor Marie was so nervous before all those 800 guests that she scarcely could eat a thing. Unbeknownst to her, she knocked a piece of chicken off her plate into the lap of Toastmaster Edgar Allen Woolf, who sat nearby. A few minutes later, Woolf urged her to try to eat something. Marie glanced nervously at her plate.

"There, my dear," she said, "see, I've eaten half of it already."

QUICK GLIMPSES:

One of the most amusing sights of the week was Elbert Franklin arriving with his car loaded with white wicker furniture to put in Toby Wing's dressing-room. . . . Thanks to skillful work by sergeants, the scar Lyle Talbot got in the auto crash is almost invisible. Lyle is making the rounds of the late spots again. He and a pretty brunette helped usher in the new show at the Club Ballyhoo Thursday night. . . . Kitty O'Dare, New York actress, who is so rich she works only for the fun of it, was another ringer at this spot.

Too tragic the death of Hugh Trevor, who would be alive today if he hadn't been so impatient to resume his normal life after an appendicitis operation. Young Trevor was the nephew of Mrs. William Le Baron and a popular figure in Hollywood. . . . Bob Armstrong is moving into his new Spanish farmhouse in Coldwater Canyon. . . . From a conversation with Joan Crawford before she left here, I am sure that she and Franchot Tone will be married after her divorce is final. . . . Marjorie King has been out again with Bernice Topitsky, but with George Raft's approval this time. . . . Judging by their rapt concentration in each other at the Clover Club after the "Only Yesterday" premiere, Sally Blane and Russ Columbo will be marrying any minute. . . . Kathryn Carver and the Serge Midvanni also drew curious eyes at this smart rendezvous.

DID YOU KNOW—That Corinne Griffith got King Vidor his first job in Hollywood? It was extra work.

The Community Paper and Your Indebtedness To It!

The value of a newspaper to the community in which it circulates is inestimable.

This statement may on the surface appear to be one of braggadocio, but if carefully analyzed by the thoughtful individual, it will prove true.

A community newspaper is continually giving valuable service and support to every activity in the area in which it circulates. It gives publicity to the activities of organizations of a religious, civic, fraternal, social and patriotic nature. This publicity is not charged for, but is given gratuitously and oftentimes but little appreciated. Those benefiting therefrom, in a thoughtful manner, take it for granted that the publicity given is news, when many, many times it is nothing more than free advertising for the various organizations.

Column after column of free publicity for churches, schools, lodges, women's organizations, civic movements, and legitimately established merchants, informing the public that they have taken on a new line of merchandise or in some manner are endeavoring to better cater to the wants of their patrons, are given in every newspaper published today. The publishers of a newspaper do not expect to be paid for such items, and no charge is ever made therefor. Those receiving the benefits of this publicity, however, can and oftentimes do reciprocate in various ways.

The average community newspaper today has three sources of revenue upon which it depends for sustenance: its paid subscription list; the income received from advertising; and the revenue which is derived from its commercial printing department which is a valuable adjunct to practically every community newspaper.

The merchants use the paid advertising columns of the publication, and thereby recompense the publisher. Churches, schools, lodges, women's organizations, and those sponsoring civic movements, can pay their indebtedness to the publication for the free space given by placing orders for whatever commercial printing they may need, thereby showing their gratitude for the aid rendered by the publication.

Those who are interested in the community in which they reside or in which they have formerly resided contribute their share to the community paper by subscribing therefor.

Unless adequate support is received by community publications as herein set forth, the publication cannot prosper and render adequate service to any community.

Are you as an individual or organization doing your part in supporting your community newspaper? Are you using its paid advertising columns; subscribing for the publication; or patronizing its third source of revenue—commercial printing department?

As an individual you can do your part by making it your personal business to see that the publication which supports your organization is subscribed for; or when paid advertising is to be placed, that it is placed in the publication which has been generous in granting the free use of its columns; or by having your commercial printing done by the organization sponsoring the publication.

Saloon Banned by Empire State Liquor Laws

Consolation for dry losers in the recent repeal fight is seen in the adoption of a stringent set of liquor regulations by New York State. The old saloon is definitely banned. Liquor may be served with meals or back rooms, meals in licensed restaurants, but the drinker must sit at a table—no more bars or brass rails or back rooms. Retail liquor stores may sell beverages for home consumption on a strict cash and carry basis, purchases being limited to three quarts to a customer at one time. The regulations, framed by the State Alcoholic Beverage Control Board under chairmanship of Edward P. Mulrooney, may serve as a model whereupon other States may create similar control laws.

Wettest State's Liquor Laws Console Drys

NEW YORK, (I.N.N.)—You may bend the elbow and drink a toast to the new wet era in "hard stuff" after December 5, but if you bend the knee to place your foot on a brass rail, you're liable to find yourself on the inside looking out.

New York Model

According to the regulations under which liquor and wine may be sold in the State of New York when the 18th Amendment is formally repealed, the old type saloon is definitely banned. The rules and regulations, made public by Edward P. Mulrooney, chairman of the State Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, occasioned no little surprise by their stringency.

Outside of New York, the code being studied by other States, for it is reasoned that if such a set of liquor regulations, stringent as they are, is acceptable to the "wettest State in the Union" it may serve as a model for the rest of the nation. Furthermore, although New York led in the fight for repeal and played no small part in the ultimate victory, the adoption of such a set of liquor-governing regulations may be taken as something in the nature of a victory for the dry—or at least for the ardent advocates of temperance.

How You'll Drink

Liquor may be sold after formal repeal by licensed stores which will be permitted to sell no more than three quarts of whiskey or three gallons of wine at a time to one customer. These stores must sell nothing else, must be on ground floors and on main streets or thoroughfares.

Liquors and wines may be served in restaurants, with or without meals. But restaurants selling liquor must have clear glass windows—opaque, colored or frosted glass is barred—and no swinging doors are permitted. Nor can a restaurant serve liquor on credit, or to persons under 18 or to habitual drunkards.

No distiller, wholesaler or retailer is permitted to sell liquor or wine in any container except sealed glass bottles containing quantities not to exceed one quart each.

An especial point is made of visibility all through the list of regulations. For instance, retail stocks must be in the open, where they can be seen, tables in restaurants must be placed in the open, no booths or cubby holes permissible.

Liquor for consumption on the premises cannot be sold within a certain radius of schools and churches, nor can it be sold either for consumption on premises or retail before 2 p. m. on Sundays and on other days before 8 a. m.

An important point is the banning of chain liquor stores. Only one license will be granted in the State to any individual, co-partnership, corporation, society or joint stock company.

Temperance the Goal

It can be seen at a glance that this set of regulations eliminates the objectionable features of the old wet era. There shall be no more "back room," which proved such an asset in the fight for prohibition.

This may result in a renaissance of home life. For if a man wants to drink he can go to a retail store, get his bottle and take it home, where there are no restrictions as to how he shall drink it. He may stand up or sit down, have it in bed with none to say him nay.

The framers of the regulations believe greater temperance than ever before will result from their efforts.

STRONG ARRAY OF TALENT NOTRE DAME EXCHANGES BOOKED FOR THE ARENA

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 15.—A strong array of wrestling talent has been signed by Matchmaker Johnny Ipp for his card at the Arena Friday night. Al "Red Devil" Gieciewicz, who took part with Stanley Pinto in the most thrilling bout ever held at the Stockton Street amphitheatre, will meet Ernie Dusek, the most famous of the Dusek brothers, in the main event, two falls out of three, 90 minute time limit. Dusek has downed some of the foremost grapplers in the game, his victims including Jim McMillen, Charley Strack, Sander Szabo, Stanley Pinto, Count Zarynow, George Zaharias and many others. Gieciewicz's record is well known to Trenton adicts and Al is in tip-top shape to wage the greatest battle of his career.

Jack Sherry, often referred to as the "uncrowned champion," will return to the local wars after an absence of many months, facing the German stalwart, Richard Stahl, in the one fall finish match. Sherry has lost only one match in the last three years and that to Strangler Lewis. He faces rugged opposition in Stahl, who has been campaigning for many years.

Stanley Pito, Bohemian rough-house artist, will tangle with Eli Fischer, Rutgers Jewish star, in the feature time limit encounter. Pinto and Gieciewicz did as much wrestling outside the ring Friday as they did on the mat.

Bert Ruby, brightest prospect in matland, will tussle with Jackie Russell of Colorado, in another 30 minute contest. Ruby grappled to a draw in a spectacular match against Emi Dusek, younger brother of Ernie last Friday.

George Manich, popular Jerseyite and Bruno Gorrosini, Italian grapple, who is adept in the flying tackle as any collegian, complete the card.

The first bout will start at 8.30.

too late. In this connection, it is interesting to note that Columbia's very enterprising Mr. Little devised a goal line spread, with flanking backs, against the Navy and the play scored, standing up. Mr. Little is a patient man but he has been getting a little weary of seeing his young men acquire a lot of landscape to no purpose.

The point is that the march down the field is always impressive until it hits the 25 yard line. Once there, you either make your move or prepare to surrender the ball. If it's the former, you go for a touchdown or wind up with a first down inside the 5 yard line, not a fool-proof position but at least a place where power generally can hope to get its result. If you don't make your move, back there 25 yards away, you find more than the secondaries closing in; you see the forward line become more compact. It even becomes more assured of its destiny. It knows that no team is so far away as the team that get a little too close.

STATE NEWS

SPRY—(INS)—Election victories usually bring happiness to successful candidates.

Success was disastrous to L. A. Kaltreider, local merchant, who was elected a director of the poor of York County for a four year term.

Over-exertion and the excitement attendant to his victory caused him to collapse. He remained unconscious five hours before a physician revived him.

HARRISBURG—(INS)—Fifty-one applicants from Hollidaysburg seeking trucking certificates from the Public Service Commission are listed on next week's P. S. C. calendar.

The calendar is one of the heaviest of the year, with a total of 143 cases listed. Four of the hearings are arguments scheduled for Harrisburg. Twenty-seven cases are listed for Pittsburgh, 25 for Pottsville, 17 for Allentown and three for Lancaster.

PITTSBURGH—(INS)—Shadyside Academy has found a solution to the time worn problem of getting their football activities back to the boys who were unable to accompany the team to out-of-town conquests.

Having an amateur radio station at the school, the radio club heads decided to have a member of the club go with the team to out-of-town games. They supplied a portable transmitting outfit which can be carried without difficulty and also a receiver.

In addition to receiving the play-by-play results of the game, the local amateur station, WSGH, will notify local newspapers of the score by periods and also relay a summary of each game. All the results are transmitted in the International Morse code.

GULLS VS. MOTORS

OAK BLUFFS, Mass.—(INS)—Seagulls are competing with motorists for use of the State highway between this town and Edgartown. The gulls, reaping a harvest of scallops along the seashore, carry them inland, high above the highway, and drop them to crack the shells, and then zoom down and eat the tender contents. A lot of motorists have cut tires as evidence of the gulls' marksmanship.

The program will take nearly two hours. Dr. Caswell does not lecture. He impersonates Abraham Lincoln from the time he steps onto the stage until the end of the program.

The program here will follow a similar performance at Newtown Friday afternoon, and precede the program at Gettysburg Sunday, in which Dr. Caswell will take part along with descendants of outstanding figures of the Civil War. The program will mark the 70th anniversary of the dedication of the National Cemetery at Gettysburg, where Lincoln made his immortal address. Dr. Caswell will deliver the address at that time.

Edgely Guild Goes "Over The Top"

organization. She said that "to be a member of the Needlework Guild you must give two new garments or a sum of money; to be a director in the Needlework Guild, you must give 22 garments and a sum of money." She stressed the point of pretty materials, garments in pairs, pride in quality; and termed the giving of the two new garments "as a gift." Mrs. Hartmann spoke of this being "your individual part in this wonderful work." She said "because of the appeal to the sympathies of those to whom we speak, it has been our habit to dwell most upon the securing of garment members and that right y securing of the garments has been our first aim; but it is equally necessary that we secure some money members to attend to the necessary financial outlay, postage, printing, etc., and that headquarters' expenses must be paid, and to do this the money members are absolutely necessary."

Mrs. Hartmann then compared the work done in the Guild with that of one of the great spans across the Hudson River, telling how it took each link and span to gradually enlarge that structure—to unite shore with shore. "So in the Guild, taking each two garments brought in by the members, these two new garments finally accumulating into millions, being the great union of all Branches of the Needlework Guild of America."

The speaker closed her talk with a poem by Kipling:
"It ain't the guns nor armament,
Nor funds that they can pay,
But the close co-operation,
That makes them win the day.
It ain't the individual,
Nor the army as a whole,
But the everlasting teamwork
Of every bloomin' soul."

Mrs. Henry Ancker, president of Bristol Branch of the Needlework Guild, the parent branch of Edgely, extended congratulations to the Edgely Guild, on the increase of garments; and expressed her pride over the growth of the child branch.

No distribut on of garments will occur until after Thanksgiving. Refreshments of home made cakes, coffee and salted nuts were served by the social committee of the guild.

GETTYSBURG—(INS)—One hundred sixty-two farmers in Adams County have filed applications for wheat allotments under the new code. Other farmers as are expected soon to make applications which provide that the wheat acreage in the county be reduced.

HOLLYWOOD, minutes notice, Cary Grant decided to fly to New York. His sudden departure and nervous manner started a hot rumor that he and Virginia Cherrill were eloping. Apparently, however, he boarded the plane alone. The low down is that Cary really is headed for Europe and wants to get aboard a ship before the studio finds out about it and summons him back for a picture. Could it be that he doesn't want to play again with Mae West?

another pledge that she will marry Pancho Lucas at the end of the 5 years. He's the former Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer office boy who was picked to play the bandit Pancho Villa as a boy.

The termination of the pledge will find Jean 22 and young Brown 25.

The membership board of the newly formed screen actor's guild was somewhat mystified when a Hollywood high school boy named Clements Beck showed up with June Knight's application and with her check for $55. He said he had found them in the middle of Sunset Boulevard where they had been passed over by so many automobiles that the actress' name was almost illegible. Next day the boy got quite a thrill when Boris Karloff visited him at school and made him a present of a ticket to the University of Southern California.

Jean Harlow is well enough to go to the mountains with husband Hal Rosson for a three days honeymoon. George Hill lent them his cabin near Lake Arrowhead.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer crew on the "Laughing Boy" location is due for quite a shock when they receive a grand piano to be transported six miles from the railroad it goes to Ramon Novarro who'll put it up in his tent.

Ramon plans to compose a song for this film. Bidding her fiancé, Maurice Hill, a tearful farewell, Fifi Dorsay is off to Portland to make personal appearances. Hill stays behind to study acting.

Jack Oakie's ma is entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Virgil E. Neal of Nice, France. Mr. Neal is a poet and used to go to school to Jack's mother back in New York.

Petite Sidney Fox and her husband, Charles Beahan, are visitors to the film colony. They'll be here for a number of days.

JACK HESTON—
SON OF THE IMMORTAL WILLIE, IS CARRYING ON FOR HIS FAMOUS DAD AT MICHIGAN!

John RANSOME
CALIFORNIA CAPT. AND TACKLE, IS THE SON OF WOLF RANSOME, FAMED BEAR TACKLE OF OLD!

LIKE father, like son" may be a hackneyed old tag, but in many cases it seems to pack a lot of weight. The current football season gives us several examples of sons following in the footsteps of fathers who gained fame on the gridiron in a past era.

At Berkeley, Cal., Bill Ingram's Golden Bears are captained by a lad named John Ransome. Football fans who followed the destinies of the California eleven a generation ago will remember that name. The famous Wolf Ransome was one of the Bears' celebrated tackles in the early days of football.

Now "Wolf Jr." is carrying on for his illustrious dad, playing the same position on the same college eleven—and acquitting himself handsomely, if anyone should ask you.

An even more remarkable football family are the Hestons of Michigan. Everyone knows of the immortal Willie Heston, most famous of all Michigan's gridiron greats. The present Wolverine team, one of the strongest in Michigan history, boasts another Heston in its line-up—Jack Heston, brilliant backfield star.

Young Jack is one of the great Willie Heston's sons, and while he can hardly be said to equal his father's grid prowess, he is nevertheless one of the best backs in the land, and a really good football player any way you take him.

If you happened to notice the line-up of Brown's freshman eleven this year, you will have seen another illustrious old football name which is being carried on in this generation. Fritz Pollard, Jr., son of the incomparable negro star of Brown who flamed into undying football glory in another era, is playing on the team at Providence, and is expected to carry on for his famous father.
